

Asthma Inception and Progression

Friday, July 29 at 3:00 pm

Major discussion question:

In an 18-month old male child (RFL) who has experienced four episodes of wheezing, the last of which was severe enough to require evaluation in an urgent care clinic, nebulized bronchodilator, and a 5-day course of oral glucocorticoids (has a + API), how would you counsel the parents who want to do everything possible to prevent RFL from developing asthma (if he doesn't have it established already) and/or preventing him from developing more severe manifestations of lower airway involvement?

